

The mathematical modelling cycle

Literature gives several representations for teaching the steps of problem solving by use of mathematical modelling. Also the mathematical modellers themselves, researchers as well as students, use a variety of representations. This diversity is studied within as well as between the two groups, including its didactical consequences.